Robert Namias joins Publicis Groupe

Paris, September 22nd, 2008 – Robert Namias joins Publicis Groupe as Advisor to the Chairman and CEO of Publicis Groupe’s Management Board, as well as Vice President of Publicis Consultants | France. This appointment is with effect from October 1, 2008. Publicis Groupe, and particularly Publicis Consultants | France, the corporate strategy and communications network headed by CEO Eric Guiuly, will benefit from Robert Namias’ vast experience in the communication and information fields.

Robert Namias comes to Publicis Groupe from TV broadcaster TF1, where he’s been employed since 1986. Editor in chief of the main evening news from 1987 to 1992, he went on to become editorial manager and finally Head of News in 1996. Robert Namias began his career with radio station RTL in 1968, then switched to Europe 1 (1969-1982), first as a political reporter and later as chief editor for the society department. From 1983 to 1987, he founded and served as chief executive of local free radio station 95.2. Robert Namias has also served as President of the French national road safety council, the Conseil national de la sécurité routière (CNSR), since 2003.
