HEALTH

Paris, 28 October 2011—Publicis Groupe announced today that Digitas Health and Razorfish Health will join Publicis Healthcare Communications Group (PHCG), powerfully redefining Publicis Groupe’s client offering to anticipate the challenges facing the healthcare sector.

PHCG is the world’s leading healthcare communications network. The new partnership with Digitas Health and Razorfish Health -- Publicis Groupe’s largest digital agencies specialized in the healthcare sector -- will reshape the range of services available to clients, further increasing their responsiveness to new social trends and to technological innovation.

This move will create patterns of cross-fertilization, ensuring that we have the sharpest and best integrated skills on the market,” explained Jean-Yves Naouri, the Chief Operating Officer of Publicis Groupe, who is responsible for overseeing PHCG. “PHCG is already the world’s largest healthcare communications network, and now with the addition of Digitas Health and Razorfish Health, PHCG will become a global marketing and media network of unmatched capability and scale. Our clients will have access to a seamless, integrated range of services devoid of silos, rich in cutting-edge skills, and strongly anchored in the landscape of the digital future.”

Digitas Health and Razorfish Health will operate as stand-alone brands within PHCG, adding to the roster of its global and regional healthcare agency brands, which includes Saatchi & Saatchi Health, Publicis Life Brands, Publicis Healthware International, Publicis Touchpoint Solutions, and Publicis Medical Education Group. Presidents Michael du Toit and Alexandra von Plato will report directly to PHCG President and Chief Executive Officer Nick Colucci.

Founded in 2006, Digitas Health quickly delivered on its vision to become a bold new force in the transformation of healthcare marketing. Just three years after launch, Digitas Health was named Medical Marketing & Media’s Agency of the Year. Today, Digitas Health is one of the most successful healthcare marketing and media agencies in the world. Razorfish Health was created in 2010 to meet the growing demand of healthcare clients for cutting-edge digital and technology solutions. Both agencies are headquartered in Philadelphia, and have locations in New York, Boston, and London. Among their top clients are AstraZeneca, Pfizer, Bristol-Myers Squibb, Shire, Novo Nordisk, and Johnson & Johnson.

“We are thrilled to welcome Digitas Health and Razorfish Health to PHCG,” said Nick Colucci. “Our clients, first and foremost, are the greatest beneficiaries of this move. They will find enhanced global access and innovation, alongside the best healthcare communications talent in the world, within a true network created by the partnership of Digitas Health and Razorfish Health with the other PHCG agencies.”
Laura Lang, Global CEO of Digitas and executive lead of the VivaKi social, mobile and digital agencies said, “I am very proud of the phenomenal success of Digitas Health and Razorfish Health, largely due to their creative core, tenacious leadership and digital heritage. While both agencies will continue to benefit from strong relationships at Digitas and VivaKi, I am confident that these two agencies will continue to thrive and contribute greatly to the future success of PHCG.”

“Our clients are demanding global scale and networked solutions now,” said Michael du Toit. “Joining forces with PHCG will give Digitas Health and Razorfish Health the greatest ability to meet the needs of consumer and professional marketers worldwide.”

“Nick has made a strong commitment to innovation and to leading in the next era of healthcare marketing,” Alexandra von Plato added. “Michael and I believe that by partnering with PHCG today we will be able to create more opportunity for our clients, our agencies, and our people in the future.”
